Update on Math Emporium Courses

Course deadlines and course policies have been adjusted to take into account the extended spring break and the transition to remote instruction.

- No tests or quizzes are due before Wednesday March 25th.
- The online textbook and practice problem system will continue to be available as before using any computer with an internet connection.
- Students will complete tests and quizzes online, not at the Math Emporium. No proctoring is required but students will be expected to follow the VT Honor Code.

Online instructional support will be available to students.

- The Math Emporium will offer online instructional support from 11 am – 6 pm, Monday – Friday.
- Floor tutors will use a ZOOM queueing system to provide ‘live’ support during these hours to students as they work through course material and practice problems.
- Instructors will offer online support during these hours – helps sessions, office hours and individual appointments via ZOOM.
- Help sessions will be recorded for asynchronous use by students.
- Instructors will post brief videos to address common questions from the students.
- Instructors will be available and responsive through email, especially for those students in very different time zones.
- For those courses with labs, GTA will offer online lab instruction and support during scheduled lab times via ZOOM.

Individual instructors will be in touch with enrolled students to share more details and specific instructions – e.g. new course deadlines, how to access floor tutors using the ZOOM queue, directions for using ZOOM, scheduled times for office hours and help sessions, etc.
